THE GREAT PREACHER'S SERMON YESTERDAY.

"Lifted from the Brick-Kiln"—People Who Think Religion Is Very Different from What It Is—How a Young Man Becomes a Christian.

BROOKLYN, Dec. 16.—[Special Report for the LOS ANGELES TIMES.] The Rev. T. De Witt Talmage's discourse today was entitled, "Lifted from the Brick-Kiln." His text was: "Though ye have lain among the pots, yet shall ye be as the wings of a dove covered with silver, and her feathers with yellow gold." Psalms, lxxviii, 13. He said:

I suppose you know what the Israelites did down in Egyptian slavery. They made bricks. Amid the utensils of the brick-kiln there were also other utensils of cookery—the kettles, the pots, the pans, with which they prepared their daily food—and when these poor slaves, tired of the day's work, lay down to rest, they lay down amid the implements of cookery and implements of hard work. When they arose in the morning they found their garments covered with the clay and the smoke and the dust, and besmudged and begrimed with the utensils of cookery. But after a while the Lord broke up that slavery, and He took these poor slaves into a land where they had better garb, bright and clean and beautiful apparel. No more bricks for them to make. Let Pharaoh make his own bricks. When David, in my text, comes to describe the transition of these poor Israelites from their bondage amid the brick-kilns into the glorious emancipation for which God had prepared them, he says: "Though ye have lain among the pots, yet shall ye be as the wings of a dove covered with silver, and her feathers with yellow gold."

Miss Whately, the author of a celebrated book, "Life in Egypt," said she sometimes saw people in the East cooking their food on the tops of houses, and that she had often seen, just before sundown, pigeons and doves, which had, during the heat of the day, been hiding among the kettles and the pans with which the food was prepared, picking up the crumbs that they might find—just about the hour of sunset would spread their wings and fly heavenward, entirely unsoiled by the region in which they had moved, for the pigeon is a very cleanly bird. And as the pigeons flew away, the young man would throw silver on their wings and gold on their breast. So you see it was not a far-fetched simile, or an unnatural comparison, when David, in my text, says to these emancipated Israelites, and says to all those who are brought out of any kind of trouble into any kind of spiritual joy: "Though ye have lain among the pots, yet shall ye be as the wings of a dove covered with silver, and her feathers with yellow gold."

sin is the hardest of all taskmasters. Worse than Pharaoh, it keeps us trudging, trudging in a most degrading service; but after awhile Christ comes, and he says, "Let my people go," and we pass out from under the bondage of sin into the glorious liberty of the gospel; we put on the clean robes of a Christian profession, and when at last we soar away to the warm nest which God has provided for us in heaven, we shall go forth as the wings of a dove covered with silver, and its feathers covered with yellow gold.

I am going to preach something which some of you do not believe, and that is that the greatest possible adornment is a religion like Jesus Christ. There are a great many people who suppose that religion is a very different thing from what it really is. The reason men condemn the Bible is because they do not understand the Bible; they have not yet examined it. Dr. Johnson said that Hume told a minister in the Bishopric of Durham that he had never particularly examined the New Testament, yet all his life warring against it. Halley, the astronomer, announced his skepticism to Sir Isaac Newton and Sir Isaac Newton said: "Now, sir, I have examined the subject and you have not, and I am ashamed that you, professing to be a philosopher, consent to condemn a thing you never have examined." As so men reject the religion of Jesus Christ because they really have never investigated it. They think it something impractical, something that will not work, something pecksniffian, something hypocritical, something repulsive, when it is so bright and so beautiful you might compare it to a chaffinch, you might compare it to a robin redbreast, you might compare it to a dove, its wings covered with silver and its feathers with yellow gold.

But how is it if a young man becomes a Christian? All through the clubrooms where he associates, all through the business circles where he is known, there is commiseration. They say: "What a pity that a young man who had such bright prospects should so have been despoiled by those Christians, giving up all his worldly prospects for something which is of no particular present worth! Here is a young woman who becomes a Christian, her voice, her face, her manners, the charm of the drawing-room. Now all through the fashionable circles the whisper goes: 'What a pity that such a bright light should have been extinguished; that a future greatness should be crippled; that such worldly prospects should be obliterated!' Ah, my friends, it can be shown that religion's ways are ways of pleasantness and that all her paths are peace; that religion, instead of being dark and doleful and lachrymose and repulsive, is bright and beautiful, fairer than a dove, its wings covered with silver and its feathers with yellow gold.

See, in the first place, what religion will do for a man's heart. I care not how cheerful a man may naturally be before conversion, conversion brings him up to a higher standard of cheerfulness. I do not say he will laugh any louder, I do not say he may stand back from some forms of hilarity in which he once indulged; but there comes into his soul an immense satisfaction. A young man, not a Christian, depends upon worldly successes to keep his spirits up. Now he is prospered, now he has a large salary, now he has a beautiful wardrobe, now he has pleasant friends, now he has more money than he knows how to spend; everything goes bright and well with him. But trouble comes—there are many young men in the house this morning who can testify of their own experience that sometimes to young men trouble does come when their friends are gone, his salary is gone, his health is gone; goes down, down. He becomes sour, cross, querulous, misanthropic, blames the world, blames society, blames the church, blames everything, rushes perhaps to the intoxicating cup to drown his trouble, but instead of drowning his trouble drowns his body and drowns his soul.

But here is a Christian young man. Trouble comes to him. Does he give up? No. He throws himself back on the resources of heaven. He says: "God is my father. Out of all these disasters I shall pick advantage for my soul. All the promises are mine, Christ is mine, Christian companionship is mine, heaven is mine. What though my apparel be worn out? Christ gives me a robe of righteousness. What though my money be gone? I have a title deed to the whole universe in the promise, 'All are yours.' What though my worldly friends fall away? Ministering angels are body-guard. What though my fare be poor and my bread be scant? I sit at the King's banquet."

Oh, what a poor, shallow stream is worldly enjoyment compared with the deep, broad, overflowing river of God's peace, rolling midway in the Christian heart! Sometimes you have gone out on the iron-bound beach of the sea when there has been a storm on the ocean, and you have seen the waves dash into white foam at your feet. They did not do any harm. While there, you thought of the chapter written by the Psalmist, and perhaps you recited it to yourself while the storm was making commentary upon the passage: "God is our refuge and strength, a very present help in time of trouble. Therefore, will I not fear though the earth be removed, and though the mountains be carried into the midst of the sea, though the waters thereof be troubled, though the mountains shake with the swelling thereof. Selah!" Oh, how independent of the religion of Christ makes a man of worldly success and worldly circumstances! Nelson, the night before his last battle, said: "Tomorrow I shall win either a peerage or a grave in Westminster Abbey." And it does not make much difference to the Christian whether he rises or falls in worldly matters; he has everlasting renown anyway. Other plumage may be torn in the blast, but that soul adorned with Christian grace is fairer than the dove, its wings covered with silver and its feathers with yellow gold.

You and I have found out that people who pretend to be happy are not always happy. Look at that young man carrying the Christian religion, scoffing at everything good, going into roystering drunkenness, dashing the champagne bottle to the floor, rolling the glasses from the barroom counter, laughing, shouting, stamping the floor, shrieking, "I will be happy! I will go to his midnight pillow. I will see him turn the gas off. I will ask myself if the pillow on which he sleeps is as soft as the pillow on which that young man sleeps. Ah, no. When he opens his eyes in the morning, will the world be as bright to him as to that young man who retired at night saying his prayers, invoking God's blessing upon his own soul and the souls of his comrades, and father and mother and brother and sister far away? No, no. His laughter will ring out from the saloon so that you hear it as you pass by, but it is hollow laughter; in it is the snapping of heart-strings and the rattle of prison gates. Happy! that young man happy? Let him fill his bowl; he cannot drown an upbraiding conscience. Let the balls roll through the bowling alley, the deep rumble and the sharp crack cannot overpower the voice of condemnation. Let him whirl in the dance of sin and temptation and death. All the brilliancy of the scene cannot make him forget the last look of his mother, as he left home, when she said to him: "Now, my son, you will do right. I am sure you will do right; you will, won't you?" That young man happy? Why, across every night there flits shadows of eternal darkness; there are adders coiled up in every cup; there are vultures of despair striking their wings in the heart; there are skeleton fingers of grief pinching at the throat. I come in amid the clicking of the glasses and under the flashing of the chandeliers, and I cry: "Woe! Woe! The way of the ungodly shall perish. The way of the wicked is destruction. The way of the transgressors is hard." Oh, my friends, there is more joy in one drop of Christian satisfaction than in whole rivers of sinful delight. Other wings may be drenched with the storm and the tempest, but the dove that comes in through the window of this heavenly ark has wings like the dove covered with silver, and her feathers with yellow gold.

I remark, religion is an adornment in the style of usefulness into which it induces a man. Here are two young men. The one has fine culture, exquisite wardrobe, plenty of friends, great worldly success, but he lives for himself. His chief care is for his own comfort. He lives uselessly. He dies unregretted. Here is another young man. His apparel may not be so good, his education may not be so thorough. He lives for others. His happiness is like mother's happy. He is as self-denying as that dying soldier, falling in the ranks, when he said: "Colonel, there is no need of those boys tiring themselves by carrying me to the hospital; let me die just where I am." So this young man of whom I speak has trod the path that leads to love Him, is not ashamed to carry a bundle of clothes up that dark alley to the poor. Which of those young men do you admire the better? The one is a sham, the other a prince imperial.

Oh, do you know of anything, my hearer, that is more beautiful than to see a young man start out for Christ? Here is some one falling; he lifts him up. Here is a vagabond boy; he introduces him to a mission school. Here is a future greatness that is crumbling under a scuttie of coal. There are eight hundred millions perishing in midnight heathen darkness; by all possible means he tries to send to them the Gospel. He may be laughed at, and he may be sneered at and he may be caricatured, but he is not ashamed to go everywhere, saying: "I am not ashamed of the Gospel of Christ. It is the power of God and the wisdom of God unto salvation." Such a young man can go through everything. There is no force on earth or in hell that can resist him.

I show you three spectacles. Spectacle the first: Napoleon passes by with the host that went down with him to Egypt, and up with him through Russia, and crossed the continent on the bleeding heart of which he set his iron heel, and across the quivering flesh of which he went grinding the wheels of infernal war, against God and poisoning whole kingdoms with his infidelity, yet applauded by the clapping hands of thrones and empires and continents—his last words, in delirium, supposing Christ standing by the bedside, were: "Crush that wretch!"

Spectacle the third: Paul—Paul, insignificant in person, thrust out from all refined association, scourged, spat on, hounded like a wild beast from city to city, yet trying to make the world good and heaven full; announcing resurrection to those who mourned at the barred gates of the dead; speaking consolations which light up the eyes of widowhood and orphanage and want with a glow of certain and eternal release; undaunted before those who could take his life, his cheek flushed with transport, and his eye on heaven, with one hand shaking defiance at all the foes of earth and all the principalities of hell, and with the other hand beckoning messenger angels to come and bear him away, as he says: "I am now ready to be offered, and the time of my departure is at hand; I have fought the good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith; henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness which the Lord, the righteous Judge, will give me."

Which of the three spectacles do you most admire? When the wind of death struck the conqueror and the infidel they were tossed like seaweed in the pest, drenched of the wave and torn of the hurricane, their dismal voices heard through the everlasting storm; but when the wave and the wind of death struck Paul, like an albatross he made a throne of the tempest, and one day floated away into the calm, clear summer of heaven, brighter than the dove, its wings covered with silver and its feathers with yellow gold. Oh, are you not in love with such a religion—a religion that can do so much for a man while he lives, and so much for a man when he comes to die? I suppose you may have noticed the contrast between the departure of a Christian and the departure of an infidel. Deodorus, dying in chains because he could not compose a joke equal to the joke uttered at the other end of his table. Zeuxis, dying in a fit of laughter at the sketch of an aged woman—a sketch made by his own hand. Mazarin, dying in prison, and unable to sign his hands because he was unable to hold them himself. All that on one side, compared with the departure of the Scotch minister, who said to his friends: "I have no interest as to whether I live or die. I shall live with the Lord, and if I live the Lord shall be with me." Or the last words of Washington: "It is well." Or the last words of Melmoth, the learned and the great: "Happy!" Or the last words of Hannah More, the Christian poetess: "Joy!" Or those thousands of Christians who have gone, saying: "Lord Jesus, receive my spirit." Come, Lord Jesus, come quickly." "O death! where is thy sting? O grave! where is thy victory?" Behold the contrast. Behold the charm of the one, behold the darkness of the other. No, I know, it is very popular in this day for young men to think there is something more charming in skepticism than in religion. They are ashamed of the old-fashioned religion of the cross, and they pride themselves on their free thinking on all these subjects. My young friends, I want to tell you what I know from observation, that while skepticism is a beautiful land at the start, it is the great Sahara Desert at the last.

Years ago a minister's son went off from home to college. At college he formed the acquaintance of a young man who I shall call Ellison. Ellison was an infidel. Ellison scoffed at religion, and he was very sure of himself. He learned from him the infidelity, and when he went home on his vacation broke his father's heart by his denunciation of Christianity. Time passed on and vacation came, and the minister's son went off to college, and on a journey and came to a hotel. The hotel-keeper said: "I am sorry that tonight I shall have to put you in a room adjoining one where there is a very sick man, and I can give you no other accommodation." "Oh," said the young college student and minister's son, "that will make no difference to me, except the matter of sympathy with anybody that is suffering. The young man retired to his room, but could not sleep. All night long he heard the groaning of the sick man or the step of the watchers, and his soul trembled. He thought to himself: Now, there is no peace, with my only to sleep, and dying man. I can give you no other accommodation." "Oh," said the hotel-keeper, "he is dead, poor fellow. The doctors told us he could not last through the night. Well," said the young man, "what was the sick one's name? where is he from?" "Well," said the hotel-keeper, "he is from Providence College. What is his name?" "Ellison," Ellison. Oh, how the young man was stunned! It was his old college mate—dead without any hope. It was many years before the young man could leave that hotel. He got on his horse and started homeward, and all the way he heard something saying to him: "Dear old friend, how much more joyful life, until he entered the Christian ministry, until he became one of the most eminent missionaries of the cross, the greatest Baptist missionary the world has ever seen since the days of Paul—no superior to Adoniram Judson. Mighty on earth, mighty in heaven—Adoniram Judson. Which do you like the best, Judson's skepticism or Judson's Christian life? Judson's suffering for Christ's sake, Judson's almost martyrdom? Oh, young man, take your choice between these two kinds of lives. Your own heart tells you this morning the Christian life is more admirable, more peaceful, more comfortable, and more beautiful."

Oh, if religion does so much for a man on earth, what will it do for him in heaven? That is the thought that comes to me now. If a soldier can afford to shout "Huzzah!" when he goes into battle, how much more jubilantly he can afford to shout "Huzzah!" when he has gained the victory! If religion is so good a thing to have here, how bright a thing it will be in heaven. I want to see that young man when the glories of heaven have robed and crowned him. I want to hear him sing when all huskiness of earthly colds is gone, and he rises up with the grand doxology. I want to know what standard he will carry when marching under the arches of peace in the army of banners. I want to know what company he will keep in a land where they are all kings and queens forever and ever. If I have not indeed met him this morning to begin a better life, then I want to know it, I may not in this world clasp hands with you in friendship, I may not hear from your own lips the story of temptation and sorrow, but I will clasp hands with you when the sea is passed and the gates are entered.

That I might see you to a better life, and that I might show you the glories with which God clothes His saints—his last words: "Crush that wretch!"

That I might see you to a better life, and that I might show you the glories with which God clothes His saints—his last words: "Crush that wretch!"

That I might see you to a better life, and that I might show you the glories with which God clothes His saints—his last words: "Crush that wretch!"

you involuntarily think of some one there that you loved—father, mother, brother, sister, or dear little child garnered already. You want to know what they are doing this morning. I will tell you what they are doing. Singing. You want to know what they wear. I will tell you what they wear: Coronets of triumph. You wonder why of they look to the gate of the temple, and watch and wait. I will tell you why they watch and wait and look to the gate of the temple. For your coming. I shout upward the news today, for I am sure some of you will repent and start for heaven. Oh, ye bright ones before the throne, your earthly friends are coming! Angels, posing midair, cry up the name. Gatekeeper of heaven, send forward the tidings. Watchman on the battlements celestial, throw the signal.

"Oh," you say, "religion I am going to have; it is a question of time." My brother, I am afraid that you may lose heaven the way Louis Philippe lost his empire. The Parisian monarch came around the Tuilleries. The National Guard stood in defense of the palace, and the commander said to Louis Philippe: "Shall I fire now? Shall I order the troops to fire? With one volley we can clear the place." "No," said Louis Philippe, "not yet. A few minutes passed on, and then Louis Philippe, seeing the case was hopeless, said to the General, 'It is the time to fire.' "No," said the General, "it is too late now; don't you see that the soldiers are exchanging arms with the citizens? It is too late." Down went the throne of Louis Philippe. Away from the earth went the house of Orleans, and all because the King said: "Not yet, not yet." May God forbid that any of you should abandon this great subject of religion, and should postpone assailing your spiritual foes until it is too late—too late, you losing a throne in heaven the way that Louis Philippe lost a throne on earth.

When the Judge descends in might, clothed in majesty and light, when the earth shall quake with fear, where, O where, will those appear?

FRESH LITERATURE.

FLORENCE PARLES. By WILLIAM J. FLORENCE (translator). Chicago, New York and San Francisco: Belford, Clarke & Company. For sale at Jones's, corner second and Main, Los Angeles.

This volume is made up of a dozen or more short stories. The style of the author is pleasant, and he charms with a vivid pen the scenes which he depicts. In the story of "Snake Poison," he sketches the family life of a polygamous Mormon, and the wives and treachery so often practiced by hoary old sinners toward the youthful victims of their lust.

Some of the stories in the volume are laid in this State, and are therefore of local interest.

SMITH AND SCHMIDT IN AFRICA. Hotentot Blue Book with 118 illustrations. By C. M. SEYFEL. English words by E. Hugh James. White & Allen, New York and London.

This book is filled with a series of humorous verses translated from the German, the perusal of which affect the reader somewhat like the antics of a clown. The point of view there is in humor, is to show the greater respect indulged in by these Hotentot savages for the German power than for that of England. For sale by J. B. Brown, Los Angeles.

THE AMERICAN DRAWING BOOK. THE GAME OF EUCER. By DENIS DE BERIAN. For sale by J. B. Brown, Los Angeles.

The above are three conveniently small pocket manuals containing full and complete instructions for playing these popular games. Bound in ivory covers, they are yet small enough to be carried in the vest pocket.

OUR WRECK ABOARD. or, How We Explored the Perilous River. By WALLACE P. STANLEY. With illustrations by Henry N. G. Chicago, New York, San Francisco: Belford, Clarke & Co.

The boys of today have a great deal to be thankful for, for the least among their blessings are the numerous delightful books written especially for them. A live book that is full of the breezy freshness of Nature, from whose pages you can get a sniff of the sea, and where, in imagination, you can dangle your line, all baited, for the unwary fish, and sail up between green river banks, while the lap of the waves keeps time to the beat of your oars; can explore grand cañons, or run free in wild pastures, and get out among the old oaks and chipmunks; where you can camp out under the stars and eat your supper by the light of a splendid camp fire; where you can go huckleberrying in fancy, and explore the mystery of the waterfalls and brown and mossy old mills; and out upon the sands of a low island capture big turtles and have a stirring fight with a huge rattlesnake, together with numberless other experiences that stir the blood and send the young man's heart throbbing with adventure. Such a book, I say, is charming, and a treasure to make glad the hearts of its young readers.

Such a book as this is the one whose title is given above. It is superbly illustrated and printed on beautiful paper, and a more delightful book for the holidays could now be found. Boys, ask your parents for it.

HISTORY OF OHIO. in words of one syllable. By ANNE C. CARY. Boston: "History of Pennsylvania," etc. With illustrations. New York, Chicago and San Francisco: Belford, Clarke & Co.

The earlier children can become interested in the study of history, particularly that of their own State and country, and obtain an intelligent knowledge of the most important events connected therewith, the surer will be aroused a spirit of loyalty and a national pride in the greatness of its past and the grandeur of its present. A history adapted to the understanding of our younger children, with its story intelligently and pleasantly told, will be valuable to put into the hands of our little ones. The volume before us is historically delightful, giving in simple language the leading events in the history of the Buckeye State. It is full of stirring incident, of thrilling experience and of heroic action. No child of the State can read it without having his pride enkindled by the deeds which it rehearse, or without experiencing a desire to emulate them. There is no surer means of nursing patriotism than by becoming familiar with history. The great deeds of those who have gone before us lend a luster in which we delight and a glory of which we are proud. Let every State foster in the breasts of their children this pride.

This "History of Ohio" is replete with interest, and the child who has once taken it up will hardly be willing to lay it down until it is finished. It is very prettily bound, printed on smooth heavy paper, in large clear type, and is finely illustrated. It is just the book for the holidays.

BELFORD'S ANNUAL 1888-9. Edited by THOMAS W. BARTON. Profusely illustrated by True Williams, H. N. Carr, Arthur Vaux, Charles H. Jones and others. Chicago, New York and San Francisco: Belford, Clarke & Co.

This annual is distinctively a book for American children, filled with delightful stories, sketches, fairy tales and choice poems, and profusely and beautifully illustrated. It will fill with joy the hearts of the child who whose Santa Claus brings it as a Christmas gift, and many a lesson of truth and of beauty will it impart. The beautiful binding is in keeping with the general attractiveness of its typographical finish, and it will be a favorite among the juvenile books of the season.

A FRIEND TO THE WIDOW. By MAPA SPENCER, author of "Calamity Jane," "Salt Lake Frontier," etc. Chicago, New York, San Francisco: Belford, Clarke & Co.

This is one of the trashy novels of the day, filled with absurdity of incident and numerous contrivances which produce a continuous social chaos of misunderstanding. It is difficult to discover the wisdom that may be learned from its pages.

Mazzini.

The Atlantic Monthly for December, as usual with that magazine, presents much interesting food for thought. "The Future of the Country College," by De Witt Hyde, is a wise and thoughtful paper, which will receive the consideration which it deserves from the educators and thinkers of the present. The serial, by Charles Egbert Craddock, is continued, with well-sustained interest. The number in its interesting table of contents, is a fitting presentation for the close of the year. LETTERS TO THE TIMES.

SEWERAGE.

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 15.—[To the Editor of THE TIMES.]—There is no question of more importance, from a sanitary point of view, than a proper system of sewerage. A large city, without such a system, is in constant danger of a sweeping epidemic. Foul sewers, stagnant pools of water and accumulation of filth and garbage, creating disease, are like so many assassins that strike their victims unaware, and rob them of life without a note of warning.

I am not for or against any particular system of sewerage in Los Angeles. What we want is thorough sewerage, and this can only be obtained under the direction of a competent engineer whom we can hold strictly responsible for the result. Two of the principal points to be considered are economy and the proper protection of the health of the people. A great deal can be said pro and con in regard to the West system. I might be said that the principal objection to it is that it has not been adopted by the cities and towns in the East or generally indorsed by sanitarians, although known since 1883, and "The Sanitary Era," last spring, in speaking of the West filtering system, after stating that it had some merits, said: "It is a modification of the English filter-bed system," and "although a great improvement over some methods used in England, it falls far short of the American system now adopted by our progressive cities, both in efficiency and economy." Is then said, "there are some foolish and disingenuous pretensions that we are sorry to see in the West circular, too illogical to call for refutation."

I should like to see the West system tried in Pasadena or some other city, but speaking for Los Angeles, as an old citizen, I should not like to see any expensive experiments made at the cost of the tax-payers. During the time that the city of Los Angeles has been discussing the subject of sewerage, and paying thousands of dollars in the past fifteen or sixteen years to different engineers for furnishing reports and plans for a sewer system, San Diego and other California towns and cities have prospered and carried out satisfactory sewer systems, and why it is that a comprehensive and perfect plan cannot be devised for this city has always been a mystery to many of her citizens who are vitally interested in her material condition. Whatever plan is adopted, a complete map should be made of the whole line of sewer pipe, (and not only of the sewers, but also of the water and gas pipes), so that the line may be traced and repairs made, or defects corrected, without the necessity of digging all over the ground at hap-hazard.

If I desired to go exhaustively into the subject of sewerage disposal I could write columns. We all know that our municipal authorities are anxious to do what is right, and to do the best they can, but they are not well versed in sanitary matters, and it is but right and proper that they should thoroughly investigate this matter for those they represent before acting. It has been said by many competent engineers in our midst that if half the money that has been needlessly expended in this city in the last few years had been put under the ground we would now have many more miles of sewers than we can claim at present. One thing is very evident—we must avoid all unnecessary outlay, such as expensive pumping machinery or tunneling, as the natural fall of the ground toward the ocean obviates the need for any such works, and we should build our sewers only as fast as actually demanded, so as not to burden the people with unnecessary taxes. What is wanted in all public works of this character is to adopt some system and gradually enlarge it from year to year as the city grows.

I do not now allude to the use of sewerage as a fertilizer. It can be so used, but it must be done intelligently and scientifically, and we should have an official sewer running to the ocean that could be used in case this irrigation should prove a failure. The municipal authorities of Los Angeles should have the sewerage system under their own control, so in case it should create a nuisance it could be at once abated by them, if within the city limits, or by the county authorities if outside; whereas, if it were controlled by any private company or corporation it is liable to abuse. It has been truly said that "sanitarians, as an abstract principle, do not think it well that the sewerage of a town or city should be consigned to a corporation organized only for profit."

GAMBLING.

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 15.—[To the Editor of THE TIMES.] In the report of a recent church fair I notice the following items among the receipts: Prize wheel, $302.20; fish-pond, $312.05; grab-box, $236.80; postoffice, $23.35. These four items give a total of $874.30. Now, sir, that money was taken by pure, simple gambling. "Where were the police?" Why should church people be allowed to gamble any more than outsiders or "any other Chinaman?" What right has a white man to gamble in the name of Christ any more than a Chinaman in the name of Confucius? Why not license all gambling, and give the sinners on Spring street an even show with the saints on Main street? CYNIC.

Mr. Cohn Proves Up.

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 15.—[To the Editor of THE TIMES.] Please correct the statement in your paper this morning. All I have done in the Workman-Bryson matter was to quote to them the sections of the charter of your city. Article 10, section 10, reads as follows: "All officers elected or appointed shall, within five days after the date of the issuance of the certificate of their election by the Clerk, qualify by giving bonds and by taking the oath of office."

Article 11, section 5: "Should any person elected fail to qualify the Council shall, at the first or any meeting thereafter, by resolution to be entered on its minutes, declare such office vacant. Your most obedient servant, B. COHN."

Albert D. Richardson.

SAN FERNANDO, Dec. 12.—[Editor of THE TIMES.] Will you be so kind as to inform me through the columns of THE TIMES who killed Richardson, the New York journalist? Also, the circumstances which led to the murder, where it occurred, etc.

Respectfully, W. ROOF.

[The slayer was Daniel McFarland, the deed was done November 26, 1869, and the provocation was the fact that Richardson had befriended McFarland's divorced wife, who had been mistreated by her husband, and whom Richardson married on his deathbed. He died December 2, 1869.—ED. TIMES.]

CATARRH

Throat Diseases, Bronchitis, Asthma, CONSUMPTION,

Together with diseases of the EYE, EAR AND HEART, SUCCESSFULLY TREATED BY

M. HILTON WILLIAMS,

M. D., M. C. P. S. O.,

HOLLENBECK BLOCK,

Corner Spring and Second Sts., LOS ANGELES, CAL.

Nearly 100,000 Cases Treated.

All diseases of the respiratory organs treated by the most improved medical inhalations and the Compound Oxygen treatment, which has such a world-wide reputation in lung and nervous affections.

We take pleasure in announcing to the public the fact that of late we have introduced the COMPOUND OXYGEN TREATMENT, with our system of the practice in the cure of Asthma, Bronchitis, Consumption, Dyspepsia, Ischemia, Sore Throat, Catarrh, Rheumatism and Nervous Prostration.

As is well known, oxygen is the life-giving principle in the air we breathe, and the air imparts that happy and buoyant feeling after a hurried journey, when the air contains more oxygen than is in the air around them; and as doors and windows to be opened, fear of cold, and the water and call for a fan to displace the stifling and bring fresher air or more oxygen. Traveling is done mainly to resorts where the air contains more oxygen, and mountains are ascended to breathe the oxygen which is so rich and invigorating.

Oxygen and ozone are gases, and must be stored up and used by the human body. Our apparatus for storing and giving these gases, compounded with other valuable agents, is perfect; and although they are not a cure-all, yet they are undoubtedly the greatest invention made in this century in any way connected with medicine, and the results are truly wonderful.

Oxygen acts by purifying the blood, thereby increasing the circulation, promotes absorption, improves digestion and assimilation, increases the capability of the lungs, and acts as a gentle stimulant to the nervous system.

The London, England, Lancet very truly says: "The Compound Oxygen treatment is the greatest discovery of the nineteenth century." Clergymen, statesmen, lawyers, doctors and all classes indiscriminately, whenever they are introduced, both use and recommend it.

We have seen so many cases of lung disease cured that do not consider an case hopeless unless both lungs are seriously involved, even then the most successful results have been obtained in contracting and healing the cavities, which nothing else can do with the same success.

The very best references from those already cured.

CONSULTATION FREE.

Those who desire to consult with me in regard to their cases had better call at my office for consultation and examination, but if impossible to do so, can write for a copy of my Medical Treatise, containing a list of questions.

GET</

WOMAN AND HOME.

IS IT TRUE THAT HOUSEKEEPING
PAYS?

Some Wise Words from a Sensible
Writer—The Charms of Homemaking—The Sunshine of Home-
The Independence and Dignity of Housekeeping.

I should feel that I was adrift in the world if I were compelled to board. I tried it for years in my early married life, and though it was board in a private family, I grew most heartily tired of it. And then when the little ones came a home seemed doubly desirable. There is something even in the care of housekeeping that gives dignity and strength to woman's character, something that inspires her to effort and that quickens her ambition in the work of making a home. It is a little world within a world, a consecrated spot from which may be debarred all outer ills.

I do not consider housekeeping to be a failure. In good housekeeping more comfort may be found for the family than can ever be secured under the most favorable circumstances to the boarder. There is a charm in its independence; a sacredness in its associations. Then, too, the individual wants and needs can be more generally consulted and supplied. The invalid does not love the menu of the hotel or restaurant. He pines for the home table. I have never discovered what it is that gives that difference of taste to the home-cooked steak, the coffee and the pudding. But it is there, all the same; and, if you are a good cook, and have well-trained servants, you will never miss it. Perhaps, some of the flavor is from the sweetness of the home atmosphere. The bright sunshine streaming in upon your own well-spread breakfast table looks especially cheerful. The husband's food is made more palatable by the thought that the wife has a care for him in its preparation, and that his individual taste has been especially regarded in everything set before him. Baby smiles up at him from his high chair, and her soft coo is like music through the breakfast. The well-prepared and daintily-set table also makes him respect more highly his wife's capabilities. She is an equal partner with him in his life's struggles, and she does her part well. He is determined, if he be a true man, not to fall behind her in the charms of the home-making. So they work together and are drawn closer by these common interests. There is a restful harbor where the storms of life do not come; where you never long to vainly for sympathy, where the little ones grow up with pleasant and sacred memories clustering about the spot where all the best joys of life center. Oh, yes, home and housekeeping pay.

Miss Jennette L. Glider writes wisely when she says: "If our women will only decide that life is not one of pleasure and idleness, that work is healthful and enjoyable, then they will make housekeeping the success it should be. A woman who gets married ought to have a home for the comfort of her husband and herself, in which she can bring up her children. A person who grows up knowing nothing of real home life, nor the training, the love, the attractions of the domestic circle, is not the same man or woman as he or she who has enjoyed these comforts and blessings. Without housekeeping the family ties are loosened, there is not the same family tenderness. True home is naturally a housekeeper. It is her peculiar province, and a good housekeeper is a good wife and mother. You cannot dissociate the two things. How many women of sense or self-respect can be content with a boarding-house or a hotel? I cannot conceive. When there are so many single women like myself, who find pleasure and profit in household duties, I cannot conceive how mothers can seek to avoid them."

Every true wife will indorse these sentiments.

NOTES.
Maryland Roast Oysters.—Select large oysters, in their shells, and scrub them clean. Fill an iron pan with them; set it over a bed of hot coals until the oysters open their shells. Have ready another clean and smaller pan over the range; put into this pan a good-sized piece of butter, a little salt and pepper, and some vinegar. Drop the oysters into this as opened, from the other pan with an oyster knife, and serve them in the second pan, steaming hot. A regular oyster party knows no scruples about its table service.

The "pickings" of roast turkey, duck or chicken may be chopped fine, and when covered with salted dressing make a very pleasant cold dish for dinner.

Motins may be killed, if under the carpet, by wringing a coarse towel tightly from clean water, spreading it upon the suspected parts and ironing with a very hot iron.

Ink stains may be removed from carpets by rubbing them with skim milk until they are almost effaced and then washing them with a cloth wrung out of boiling water without soap.

Boil fish in salt water. A good way is to wrap the fish in a napkin. Salmon and all dark-flesh fish require more cooking than lighter flesh fish. Salmon requires 10 minutes to the pound, while cod only requires three minutes.

Soak a ham 12 hours before boiling it. Then let it cool half an hour in the liquor in which it has cooked. The next day remove the skin and put the ham, covered with bread crumbs, in the oven a half hour before dinner. It is a most delicious dish.

A good relish for supper may be made in this fashion: Put chipped beef, smoked or dried, in a frying-pan with cold water and let it boil. Then thicken it with flour to the consistency of gravy, and add pepper and butter. This makes a delicious dish, and uses up the remnants of dried beef at the same time.

The Nursery Toilet.—The habit of washing children's hair or using a wet brush in dressing their hair should be avoided. Water constantly evaporating from the surface affects the natural circulation, the color and oil of the hair. It should be used on the scalp only, to cleanse it, or at fixed times to wash the hair, and this preferably at night, when the head can be well covered up to avoid catching cold. The use of hot water instead of cold for cleansing the scalp and hair may be recommended. Hot water is a stimulant, and should give the hair a good color.

The leading bakers use Crown flour because it is the best.
